

ANNEX D - PSPC RESPONSES

Procurement Mode Adoption

- PSPC is focused on modernizing procurement of all forms, and recognizes that P3s, as well as other innovative forms of delivery, can be an effective approach to deliver public infrastructure projects that provides value for money and ensures that Canadians benefit from world-class infrastructure.
- Subsequent to the dissolution of PPP Canada, each government department became responsible for the delivery of its own P3 program of projects. In response, PSPC created the Innovative Delivery Strategies directorate to support consistency in the planning and delivery of its P3 projects and to provide this service as an optional fee-for-service to other government departments.
- For major capital construction, various methods of procurement are considered, including P3 models. In general, this process begins with an initial triaging in consideration of the asset to determine which of the various procurement options available to government are likely to be considered viable.
